State Archeologist Hathorn Speaks to Hoover Historical Society

BY DONALD JAY HOWTON WESTERN STAR STAFF

The Hoover Historical Society began the New Year with the January 30 meeting held at the City of Hoover Community

The guest speaker was Stavce Hathorn, archeologist with the State of Alabama, Alabama Historical Commission.

The regular scheduled business meeting lowed the program.

Linda Joseph is president of the Hoover Historical Society.

Hathorn's subject was "The Discovery of the Clotilda," a Gulf Coast schooner built in 1855 in Mobile. The Clotilda transported 110 enslaved people from West Africa to Mobile in 1860 decades after the importation of slaves became illegal.

After the trip, the owner of the ship burned and scuttled the ship near Twelve Mile Island, just north of Mobile Bay to avoid prosecution.

Included in the presentation were pictures of the sonar images of the Clotilda and pieces of timber that dated to the time and place where the ship was built. Also shown were images of the delicate preservation process used by the scientists on a barge near the Clotilda

The artifacts of the Clotilda are housed in the Heritage House Museum of Mobile, Alabama.

Hathorn was the project manager and lead scientist of the investigation that identified the Clotilda in the Mobile River in May 2019. Scientists and maritime geologists from The Smithsonian Institution, National Geographic and others collaborated in the effort.

A Night of Recognition and Civic Engagement: Highlights from Hoover City Council Meeting

SPECIAL TO THE STAR

The latest Hoover City Council meeting held on Monday night was a vibrant gathering filled with commendations, proclamations, and glimpses into the outstanding achievements of community members. From honoring the excellence of Hoover High School's JROTC program to expressing gratitude for a generous donation to the Hoover Fire Department, the meeting showcased the city's commitment to recognizing and supporting its residents. Let's delve into the noteworthy moments that unfolded during this civic assembly.

One of the evening's highlights was a comprehensive report by Hoover High School's Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps (JROTC), shedding light on the program's remarkable accomplishments over the past year. The JROTC team proudly shared news of their national trophies and recognitions, emphasizing the dedication and hard work that has propelled the program to new heights.

Mayor Brocato and the Hoover City Council took a moment to express their gratitude to the Jefferson County Commission, President Jimmie Stephens, and his Chief of Staff, Chris Willis. The heartfelt appreciation was directed at their benevolent donation of a medical transport unit to the Hoover Fire Department. This generous act is sure to enhance the city's emergency response capabilities and underscores the spirit of collaboration within the community.

Abbie Stockard, crowned as Miss Hoover 2024, captivated the crowd with her enthusiasm and dedication to service. She shared insights into her impactful service initiative and announced an upcoming fundraiser in support of Cystic Fibrosis. Miss Hoover's commitment to making a positive difference in the community serves as an inspiration for residents to join hands in supporting important causes.

Mayor Frank Brocato and the Hoover City Council extended their best wishes and issued a proclamation to Miss Hoover's Teen 2024, Ali Mims. As she gears up to participate in the upcoming Miss Alabama's Teen pageant in March, the city recognizes and applauds her dedication to representing Hoover on a larger stage. The event underscored the city's pride in its young talents and their contributions to the broader community.

The City Council meeting also served as a platform for political engagement, with two aspiring candidates addressing the audience. Josh Sisk, running for Shelby County Commissioner in District 6, shared his vision for the community and announced his participation in the primary election scheduled for Tuesday, March 5, 2024. Likewise, Charlotte Meadows, a candidate for the State Board of Education in District 3, took the opportunity to connect with voters ahead of the general election on the same date.

The Hoover City Council meeting was a testament to the vibrant community spirit and the city's commitment to recognizing and supporting its residents. From celebrating the achievements of local youth to expressing gratitude for acts of generosity, the meeting highlighted the diverse talents and contributions that make Hoover a thriving and engaged community. As residents look forward to upcoming elections, the gathering served as a reminder of the importance of civic participation and the impact individuals can have on shaping the future of their city.

Hoover Mayor Frank Brocato said he believes there are four reasons the city stands out during his State of the City address. It comes down to livability, innovation, diversity and perspective, he said.

"Our city is booming and it's setting us apart from our neighbors and positioning us to be a leader among our peer cities," Brocato said. "So as I close, it's not enough to talk about these things. We must see ourselves as the leaders that we are. A few years ago, I asked our city council to be bold. Not only have they been bold, but they've been strategic and wise. I'm grateful to see who we are and where we are. I'm very excited to see where we are going."
